HERE'S LOOKIN' AT YOU, MURPHY

BY NATHAN STRAUSS

Owen Murphy walked off the mound at Carilion Clinic Field in Salem, Virginia with a smile on his face. Four days later, the smile would return as the Carolina League named him as their Player of the Week, Murphy's first league-wide honor. The first full professional season for Atlanta's 2022 first-round selection is drawing to a close, and the 19-year old Murphy is reflecting on the last six months.

Murphy, or "Murph" to his teammates and coaches, has been the subject of media attention since his commitment to Notre Dame as a student at Riverside-Brookfield High in the Chicago suburbs. Named the Perfect Game Two-Way Player of the Year in 2022, Murphy excelled on the mound and at the plate, hitting over .500 while also striking out two batters per inning.

As the possibility of being drafted mounted and conversations with scouts intensified, he knew he might have to make a choice. "Scouts told me I had a fifth round bat, but a second round arm," says Murphy with a laugh. Murphy had dominated for his high school team, while also playing nationally with the USA Under-18 team and the prestigious Rake City and Canes travel ball programs. The Braves ended up betting on his arm in the first round, taking him with their first-round pick.

The expectations, both internal and external, were high. After a dominant first month of the year, batters began to catch up. There have been growing pains this year for Murphy, as there often are with first-year professionals. "I didn't know what made me good," he said with a grin. "I thought my fastball was good because I threw it hard."

Murphy has long garnered praise for his intense competitiveness, but baseball is a long season and losses come just as frequently as wins. "It's beneficial to Owen to learn how to lose," ...

...noted manager Cody Gabella after a rough outing when borderline calls went against his starter, chasing Murphy from the game in the first inning. "It's part of the game, and the best players are just as good at handling the rough spots as they are at finding success."

Wes McGuire, Augusta's pitching coach, shared more on their strategy. "In high school, Owen was able to get by on his fastball, because it was that much better than anything anyone else had seen. A lot of what we've done this year is diversifying from that pitch and working on building up his other offerings." McGuire and Murphy frequently work individually, going over everything from pitching mechanics to mental strategies and even just tossing a Frisbee to stay loose.

Part of those growing pains were reflected in a handful of rough outings in the middle of the year. Murphy, still two full years younger than the average player in the Carolina League, struggled with confidence. "I started overthinking, and that led to overthrowing, and changing up things I normally do well," Murphy said. "But that's part of the process of figuring out where you want to be."

Murphy, often found listening to unreleased Mac Miller or deep in a book before his starts, had to learn to take the spins of baseball in stride. The youngster fanned 12 Delmarva Shorebirds in a late June outing, becoming the first GreenJacket since AJ Smith-Shaver to K a dozen; two weeks later, he was chased after walking the bases loaded and surrendering a grand slam. Still, Murphy entered the second half of the season leading Augusta in strikeouts and innings pitched, but also carrying the intangible benefits of learning through struggles.

Something seemed to click in Murphy's first August start, in which the Illinois native flashed a new-look curveball and fanned nine. One particular at-bat stood out, when Murphy flicked three straight curveballs (one at 66 miles an hour) to Jean Ramirez, a .300 hitter. With a 1-2 count, Murphy reared back and fired a fastball past the batter, nearly 30 miles an hour faster than the previous pitch to record the strikeout.

"That was pretty dang fun," chuckled Murphy. The day after a start is typically a recovery day for a pitcher, but Murphy volunteered for an autograph session with fans less than 24 hours later. As he signed autographs for kids and collectors alike and even posed with a fan with a GreenJackets jersey customized with Murphy's surname and number seven, his smile never wavered.

"It's more important to me to be a well-developed person off the field than whatever is happening out there," Owen says with a wave towards the diamond. "My whole purpose in this game is to grow it." Card collectors, whose presence around team buses and autograph sessions can occasionally commoditize prospects for their signatures, are never a hassle for him, nor are the myriad children who swarm the Augusta bullpen for pictures or free baseball.

Call it karma, or call it the fruits of his labors. His next start following the curveball showcase against Columbia, Murphy carried a no-hitter into the seventh inning in Salem. He gave up his first and only hit to Mikey Romero - whom Murphy knew from his showcase days and from the green room at the Draft, when Romero went four picks after him - in the bottom of the seventh. The Salem fans saluted Murphy with a round of applause as he exited the game after his eighth and final strikeout, a gesture of appreciation seldom seen for visiting players.

Murphy, initially frustrated at having to come out of the game, lifted his head and delivered a wry smile. Even in the bad times, the smile never faded. The best times are still to come.
