

Every year, the Quad Cities community opens their homes to players from around the world as part of the Quad Cities River Bandits/Kansas City Royals host family program. These families have helped hundreds of young men adjust to life as a professional baseball player by providing them with a welcoming home for the season as they continue their journey to the big leagues. All players on the Quad Cities River Bandits are either drafted or signed as a free-agent and are under contract with the Kansas City Royals. Host families are not financially compensated but will be given season tickets to come watch their player(s) develop during their time in Quad Cities. If you are interested in hosting a Royals player(s) for the season, please see the details below.

Ideal Host Families:

Committed to the entire season (April 1 – September 30).

Provide free room and board in a safe and clean environment.

Players will need to have their own room and have access to a bathroom, laundry, and refrigerator. If hosting more than one player, two can share a room as long as they have their own beds.

Players are required to provide food for themselves, but a home cooked meal every now and then is always appreciated.

Assistance with transportation may be helpful for some players, but this is not required.

The host family should have their own set of house rules that the player will be required to follow but should be aware that players often arrive home late at night after games or after a road trip.

Why do we request host families:

Players make a low salary and may be promoted to the next level at any point. Quad Cities is typically a player's first or second step in professional baseball.

Due to frequent organizational transactions, some players might be in Quad Cities for a brief amount of time and then leave on short notice. Finding a short-term apartment lease is very difficult and players spend very few hours at home.

Typically, all players are signed right out of high school or college. Host families help players adjust to life as a professional baseball player.

HOST FAMILY STANDARDS

Greetings and Congratulations on Becoming a Kansas City Royals/Quad Cities River Bandits Host Family!

As host families, you are an extension of the Kansas City Royals and the Quad Cities River Bandits, and we are honored and humbled for you to be sacrificing your home, time, energy, and resources to benefit our Minor League Players. Your volunteerism plays an enormous role in the development process, and we would not be able to as effectively grow our players both on the field and off without it. Although our players are of high character and integrity, there is still a need to have standards in place to ensure a proper relationship between the host family and player. You will find these standards below.

We thank you again for your time and service and welcome you to the Kansas City Royals and Quad Cities River Bandits Family.

Sincerely,

J.J. Picollo
Vice President/Assistant General Manager – Player Personnel
