LAST TIME OUT: The Clearwater Threshers opened a nine-game homestand with a 7-6 victory in seven innings over the Bradenton Marauders on Friday night at BayCare Ballpark. The contest was ruled official following a second weather delay in the bottom of the seventh. Right-hander Sam Coonrod, on an MLB Rehab assignment from the Philadelphia Phillies, made the start and tossed one scoreless inning with a strikeout on the mound for Clearwater. Fellow rehabber, Cam Berdosian (AAA Lehigh Valley) also worked a clean second inning, allowing one walk and striking out one. The Threshers (8-14, 43-44) opened the scoring in the bottom of the second on a solo home run by Andrick Nava. It was Nava's third long ball of the season. Following an extended weather delay in the top of the third, the Marauders (14-8, 43-44) pushed home three runs off righty reliever Starlyn Castillo to make it 3-1. Trailing 3-1 in the bottom half of the third, the Threshers stormed back with three runs of their own on an RBI single by Nava and two costly Bradenton fielding errors to grab a 4-3 advantage. After the Threshers scratched across two more in the fourth on RBI singles by third baseman Hao Yu Lee and Marcus Lee Sang, the Marauders responded in the sixth with three more runs off relievers Sam Jacobsak and Victor Lopez to tie the game 6-6. Lee, playing in first game at home since May 31 finished the contest 3-for-4. Tied 6-6 in the sixth, the Threshers used a double by Lee and a single from Lee Sang to put runners on the corners before second baseman Kendall Simmons pushed home the go-ahead run with an RBI groundout to make it 7-6 in favor of the home team. Left-hander Gabriel Yanez worked a scoreless top of the seventh out of the bullpen, allowing only one hit and striking out one to keep the Threshers in front. Yanez was credited with his first save of the season, as the game was halted due to lightning in the bottom of the seventh and never resumed.
