FORMER JACKETS RISING UP LEVELS OF ORGANIZATION

The Atlanta Braves have never been shy at rewarding strong performances with promotions across levels of the minors, and this year has been no different. A handful of players from Augusta's Opening Day roster have found themselves moving on to the next level. After a period of settling in, those alums have all worked to find success in their new challenges.

Riley Frey was the first of this year's GreenJackets to get the call up to Rome after a dominant start in Augusta. Frey was actually supposed to begin the year in Rome, but a preseason injury on Augusta's roster forced Frey to slide back down for April. After throttling Carolina League hitters, going 3-0 in 5 games with a 1.54 ERA, Frey returned to Rome for his Emperors debut, and has been equally impressive. The long-levered lefty is 2-0 in 6 appearances at the High-A level, with a 1.80 ERA in 30 innings. Frey's strikeout totals have not translated, but his ability to induce soft contact continues to impress.

While Frey technically "returned" to Rome despite never having thrown a pitch for the Emperors, Luis Vargas' promotion was a true resurgence for a righty that had thrown nearly 60 innings in the South Atlantic League in 2023. Vargas finished last season back in Augusta, and returned to SRP Park for 2024, his 3rd stint in Augusta. After a solid start as a reliever, Vargas returned to the rotation to replace Frey, and immediately looked the part. Vargas' high-velocity fastball and strong command earned him a promotion to Rome, where through his first two starts he's picked up two wins and allowed just one run in 11.1 innings while striking out 13.

The GreenJacket offense took a big blow in early June when its two biggest contributors, Drew Compton and Jace Grady, were promoted together to the Emperors' roster. The two switch hitters were 1 and 2 in nearly every offensive category two months into the year, and while their callup hurt the 'Jackets, it was more than earned. Both have seen a near-everyday role at first base and right field respectively, and are starting to find their footing offensively. Compton hit his first Rome home run on June 13th, and Grady followed suit two days later. Grady leads the pairing offensively early, but both found a productive role in Rome's chase for a first-half crown.

While all the aforementioned players have settled in nicely in Rome, one man has already been promoted further to AA Mississippi. Left handed pitcher Mitch Farris, a 14th Rd pick last year out of Wingate College who was not a full-time pitcher until his final year of college, has flown up the organizational ladder from Augusta to Mississippi in less than half a season. Farris began the year as a multi-inning reliever for the GreenJackets who eventually entered the rotation, making a pair of starts in seven appearances and striking out a ridiculous 37 batters in 22.2 innings before he was called up to Rome. His impressive 2024 would continue at the next level, as in 5 starts Farris went 1-1 with a 2.45 ERA and over a strikeout per inning once again. To correspond to a series of upper-level moves, and thanks to his impressive numbers led by a dominant changeup, Farris got the call up to Pearl and the AA Mississippi Braves and made his Southern League debut on June 18th.

With the year continuing to roll on, and a rush of new players set to join the organization in July from the 2024 MLB Draft, it's only a matter of time until more GreenJackets join their former teammates at the next level this summer. When they get there, the path to success will already have been paved by the first crop of both pitchers and position players who have earned the call-up, and earned the right to stay.
