TOP PROSPECT CAMINITI MAKES LANDFALL IN AUGUSTA

A GreenJackets squad that has been as exciting to watch as any in the Braves' organization added yet another top prospect, as first-round pitcher Cam Caminiti was added to the roster earlier this month.

Augusta's pitching was tops in the Carolina League through the first two months of the season, but the promotion of five pitchers to High-A Rome had thinned the herd significantly for manager Wynston Sawyer. The addition of Caminiti, an 18-year-old southpaw with a near-limitless ceiling, puts a jolt into a rotation looking to continue the promise showed early.

The youngest player on the roster, Caminiti was drafted 24th overall by the Braves last summer after leading Saguaro High School to the Arizona 4A State Championship. The two-way star was named the Gatorade State Player of the Year, but his youth is what set him even further apart. Caminiti reclassified prior to the 23-24 school year, jumping up a grade level to make himself draft eligible one summer earlier.

For Caminiti, joining an organization like Atlanta that is consistently lauded for developing pitchers was a match made in heaven. Cam's pedigree promptly placed him near the top of the Braves' laundry list of pitching prospects, as well as within MLB Pipeline's Top 100 prospects across all 30 organizations.

Caminiti, the cousin of former NL MVP Ken Caminiti, began the march to meeting the lofty expectations set upon him last August, with a one-game debut with the GreenJackets shortly after his 18th birthday. With a ton of eyes on him from fans, evaluators, and Braves' brass, the teenage phenom navigated the pressure and hurled three one-hit innings, striking out four including fellow Top-100 Prospect Blake Mitchell.

After four starts with the FCL Braves in the rookie-level Florida Complex League, Caminiti now returns for an expectedly longer stretch of summer to truly dive into his professional career. And while 2025 may come with high expectations for the 18-year-old hurler, Cam has consistently spoken of the ability to lean on both teammates and family to temper his nerves and focus solely on the task at hand.

Caminiti's parents were on hand for his season debut last homestand, and he has credited them for helping his mindset both on and off the field. More locally, he is one of a plethora of players this summer that have spoken to the closeness and cohesion of the clubhouse. The looseness in the locker room, the excitement to play the game, and the togetherness created under Wynston Sawyer have all led to improvements from young players, and Caminiti could be next in line.

Cam will not turn 19 until the middle of August. Had he taken a more traditional path, he would have just walked across the stage and earned his high school diploma, and would be setting plans for the summer and potentially college in the fall (he was committed to LSU before turning pro). Instead, he finds himself in the middle of a GreenJackets pitching staff that has high expectations for the rest of 2025. It's a challenge Caminiti has prepared for, but one that is far from the final goal. With visions of Atlanta on his mind, and Braves fans everywhere keenly tuning into his development, this summer has the makings of an incredibly intriguing one for the organization's first round pick.
