THE WORLD'S GAME: THE GREENJACKETS ARE AN INTERNATIONAL AFFAIR

Baseball players come from far and wide, and each has their own unique path to professional baseball. Players come from junior colleges and four year schools, international signees and high school draft picks, all joined together to make up the 2024 GreenJackets roster.

For many who grow up in the United States, playing in college is the common pathway to getting drafted. Thirteen players on the GreenJackets' initial roster come from Division 1 schools, including OF Jace Grady (Dallas Baptist), INF Cam Magee (Washington State), and LHP Riley Frey (UW-Milwaukee). Players from smaller schools still find ways to stand out, especially in today's digital age, and reach the next level, like pitchers Mitch Farris (D2 Wingate University) and Will Silva (Miami Dade Community College).

Since the MLB Draft was sliced from 40 rounds down to 20, many premier players have still found themselves without a team when the final name is called. The rise of undrafted free agents has been substantial over the last 5 years, and Augusta's roster is full of contributors that fit the bill. Catcher Jacob Godman (Oral Roberts), INF Drew Compton (Georgia Tech), and RHP LJ McDonough (Florida Gulf Coast) all signed UDFA deals to enter the Braves' organization and have worked their way into roles in Augusta

When people say "the world's game," they are often referring to soccer. However, this year's GreenJackets roster shows that baseball, too, is an international affair.

The GreenJackets' opening day roster featured three Canadians – Adam Shoemaker, Pier-Olivier Boucher, and Adam Maier. Shoemaker was drafted out of a prep school in Canada, while Maier started his career at the University of British Columbia in his home country before transferring to the University of Oregon in his draft year. Boucher, a converted hockey player who did not pick up baseball until late in his high school career, came to the US for college, playing at Iowa Western Community College before transferring to Southern Illinois University.

THE WORLD'S GAME: THE GREENJACKETS ARE AN INTERNATIONAL AFFAIR

For players who grew up in Central and South America, the process to professionalism is far different. International players start negotiating deals with pro teams as early as 13 years old, and are eligible to sign once they turn 16. From there they are generally sent to academies in the Dominican Republic to hone their baseball skills and develop off-the-field talents necessary to prepare for life as a player in America. GreenJackets players like RHP Davis Polo, C Alexander Martinez, and INF Leiker Figueroa all went through the international signing stage and came from the Dominican Summer League to complex play in North Port, Florida before being assigned to Augusta.

All told, the GreenJackets boast players from the United States, Canada, the Dominican Republic, Columbia, Panama, and Venezuela. Of the American players, 14 different home states are represented, as well as college programs all over the country. Isaiah Drake is the lone local player, hailing from Atlanta and traveling two hours from home to compete this season. As baseball continues to grow its borders beyond the US, the rosters only flourish as top-tier talent from all across the globe unite to fulfill their dreams of making it big.
