Sacramento's Sweet Swinging Son

Chase Davis Wows Springfield with Beautiful Swing

On any given night at Hammons Field, you're likely watching a future St. Louis Cardinals star. In 2025, one of those dons the number five and roams the outfield grass: Chase Davis.

The first-round pick out of the University of Arizona in 2023 is used to being in the spotlight. Every scouting report, video breakdown and prospect write-up (including this one) will compare his left-handed swing to former Major League All-Star Carlos González. The resemblance is uncanny: a slightly open stance from the left side, a looping inverted-parabola bat path and a one-handed finish prime for gorgeous bat drops on moonshot home runs.

"It gets annoying sometimes, I'm not going to lie," Davis laughed while praising González and those comparisons during a video podcast interview on the Springfield Cardinals YouTube Channel. "It's a cool [comparison]. What a player to be [compared] to."

Davis said he's had the same swing mechanics since the age of twelve, growing up in Elk Grove, CA, a suburb of the state capital Sacramento. He explained that he did initially mimic his swing after the long-time Colorado Rockies star and his favorite player growing up. That smooth swing came into play nearly immediately when Davis made his Springfield debut on September 7, 2024 at Hammons Field. The now tenth-ranked prospect homered on the second pitch he ever saw in Double-A, a no-doubter to right. He even dropped the bat in style, just like his childhood hero.

It isn't only the swing that has fans and scouts alike raving. Davis' outfield play has produced several dazzling highlights in less than a year with Springfield. In that same Double-A debut game in 2024, Davis made a leaping grab at the left field fence, robbing extra bases while crashing into the bullpen wall. In the first road trip of 2025 to Amarillo, TX, he made five different incredible diving plays in a six-game stretch. His play on the field has been impressing everyone for years, well before he became a top prospect in the Cardinals system.

Davis was slated to be a high draft pick out of Franklin High School in Northern California. When COVID-19 cancelled his senior season and Major League Baseball shortened the draft to five rounds, the then-18-year-old pivoted and made good on his commitment to the University of Arizona.

"It was an outlook on my future that I felt like would be more beneficial. I think taking three years at school would have solidified a better chance at me going into the draft and pro ball," he explained. Davis's "gamble" paid off in a big way. He had a monster career for the Wildcats, becoming a Golden Spikes Award and Dick Howser Trophy Semifinalist, and was a career .319 hitter in three NCAA seasons. His stock rose thanks to his collegiate career en route to a 21st overall selection and $3.6 MM signing bonus. The announcement of his name on draft day brought a sense of relief and validation to years of hard work from him and his family.

Chase Davis may not be a household name to St. Louis Cardinals fans just yet in 2025. But as that sweet swing continues to impress fans around the Ozarks and the Texas League, his name recognition grows. With each arched swing, he inches closer and closer to the shadow of The Arch.

Rajcic and Mautz Each Win Pitcher of the Week Awards

The Springfield Cardinals starting rotation is off to a roaring start in 2025. Twice in the first month of the season Springfield has had the Texas League Pitcher of the Week on their staff. RHP Max Rajcic was given the honor for the week of March 31 - April 6. LHP Brycen Mautz was given the same award April 14 - 20. It's the first time in franchise history that two pitchers have won this award in April.

This is the second time in Rajcic's career that he has won a Pitcher of the Week award, last occurring in the Florida State League on June 4, 2023. Rajcic made his 2025 season debut against the Wichita Wind Surge on Sunday, April 6 in game one of a doubleheader. Springfield's number 23-ranked prospect according to MLB Pipeline fired five scoreless innings, allowing just one hit and one walk while striking out four. The righty earned his first win of the season as Springfield blanked Wichita 5-0. In addition to nailing down the series win, Rajcic's performance led the Cardinals to their 700th all-time victory at their home ballpark Hammons Field.

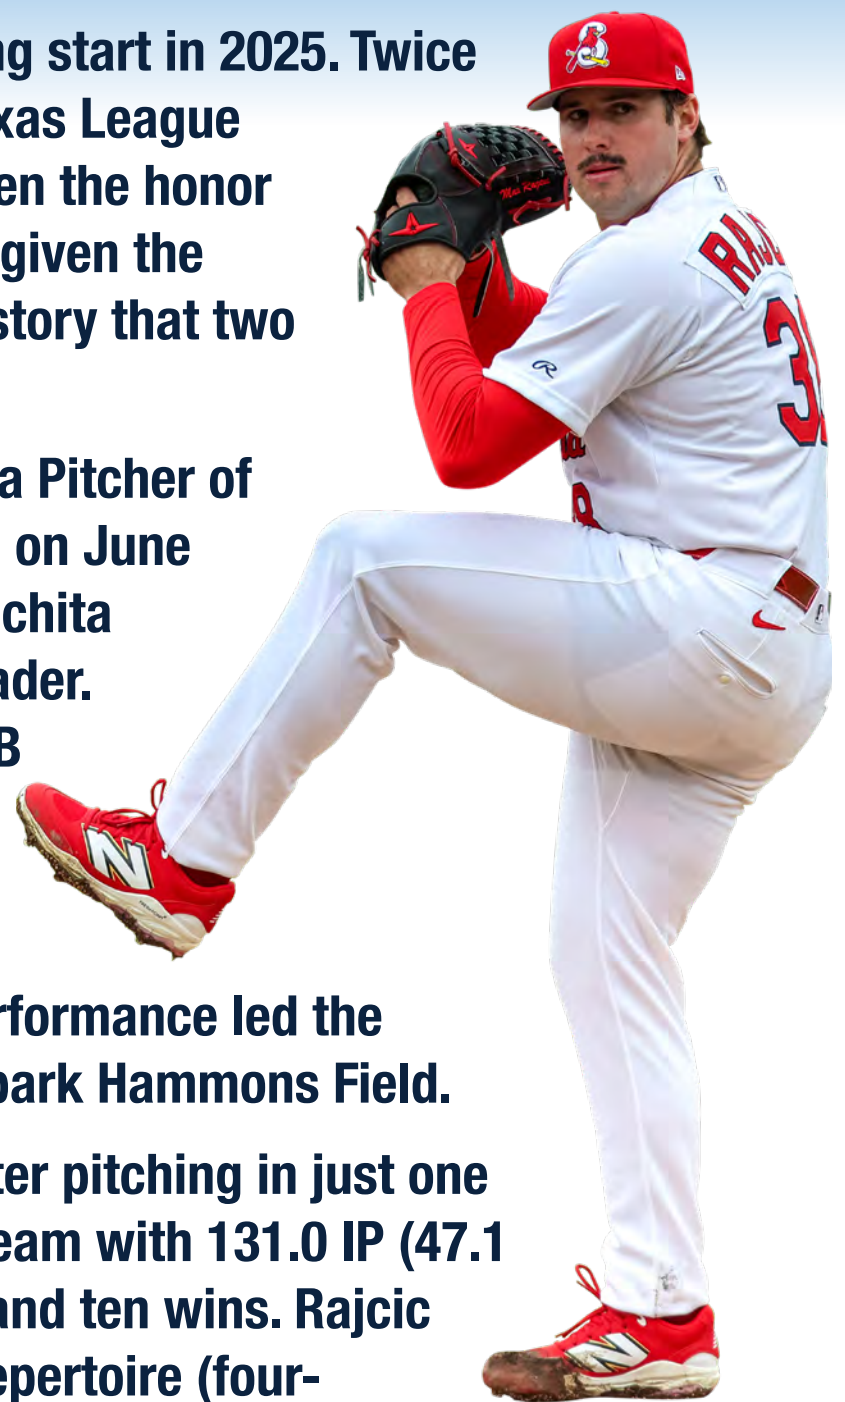

Rajcic is now in his second full season with Springfield after pitching in just one postseason game for the club in 2023. In 2024 he led the team with 131.0 IP (47.1 more than the next pitcher Alex Cornwell), 131 strikeouts and ten wins. Rajcic is a five-pitch starter who recently added a sinker to his repertoire (four-seam fastball, curveball, slider, changeup). 2025 marks his third season in the Minor Leagues, all with St. Louis. He was named the 2023 St. Louis Cardinals Minor League Pitcher of the Year in his first season after being drafted in the sixth round out of UCLA.

Minor League Baseball named Mautz the Pitcher of the Week on April 21. It was the third Pitcher of the Week award he had received in his career, with the previous two coming in the Florida State League in 2023.

On Tuesday, April 15, Mautz made his Hammons Field debut against the Arkansas Travelers. The southpaw went five innings of one-hit, shutout baseball with one walk and eight strikeouts. The former University of San Diego Torero also struck out the first five batters he faced to begin the game. Through two starts this season, Mautz has a 3.38 ERA across eight innings of work.

Mautz is in his third season in the St. Louis system after being drafted 59th overall in the 2022 MLB Draft (second round). The San Diego, CA native made 23 starts in his first season (2023) with the Palm Beach Cardinals (A-) to the tune of a 3.98 ERA. In 2024 with Peoria (A+), he ranked fourth among all High-A pitchers in strikeouts with 128. He entered the 2025 season as the number 29-ranked prospect in the Cardinals system according to Baseball America. Mautz features a four-seam fastball, sinker, slider, curveball and changeup.

Both Rajcic and Mautz are off to great starts in 2025. They look to continue to lead a star-studded Cardinals rotation which also features Tekoah Roby (#12 prospect), Pete Hansen and Ixan Henderson this season.
