Another D-backs staffer said it's the most raw power he's ever seen. Reported signing bonus: $200,000 Still an unknown heading into this year: the baseball world is just now becoming aware of his potential MLBpipeline says: he is D-backs' #12 prospect; "De Los Santos makes good use of his strong lower half and drives the ball to all fields... he moves well for someone his size, giving the organization hope he'll be able to stick at third base. However, there remains a chance he outgrows the position and has to move across the diamond to first. He's made strides defensively since signing, showing soft hands and an above-average arm to go with improving footwork. The power bat will ultimately be De Los Santos' ticket to the Majors, where he profiles as a middle-of-the-order slugger."
