ALL-STAR INTERVIEW

BY NATHAN STRAUSS

The GreenJackets gave away a Spencer Strider bobblehead on Friday, July 21st. Before that day, GreenJackets radio broadcaster Nathan Strauss traveled to Atlanta to have a chat with the subject of the giveaway, Spencer Strider himself!

Nathan Strauss: You were the first GreenJackets player to make their debut with the Braves after the affiliation began a couple of years ago. What was your memory or what was the top memory of your time in Augusta?

Spencer Strider: I liked Augusta. I had a good apartment. I enjoyed the city a lot and didn't get to spend as much time there as I would have liked, given how much I like the city, but it has a great stadium, and good fans. It was a good team that we had and it was a fun time.

You made your debut for the Braves just five months after beginning the season with Augusta. What was it like as you continued to get promoted during that season?

It was cool to just get promoted and go play with them and see some guys that I had gotten to know along the way and get better. I got to Mississippi and I was challenged a little bit in Double-A but it helped me learn some stuff. I'd say the biggest focus was on developing a good secondary pitch. When I got to Double-A, my slider and curveball that I was throwing wasn't as effective. And so, I sort of had to develop a different type of slider and it happened pretty quickly.

How important to you is knowing your own mechanics and knowing what you do well?

I think it's huge. I mean, you got to know what your strengths are, number one. And that's something this organization is good at highlighting is you're only going to be successful by doing what you're good at. So, you know, you kind of need to improve, but you don't want to take steps too far away from your skill set to get better. And I think knowing why you're good at doing what you are is important. At Clemson in college, I figured out some metrics on my fastball once we were able to get some of that data capturing technology, and I realized some mechanical things that I was doing that weren't working. So I was able to kind of change them and create a different delivery.

If you had to give advice to a young pitcher who's in the system right now who is sort of working out, figuring out what they do well, what would that advice be?
I'd say that results are important. Every organization wants players that they think can help them at the big league level, and it doesn't matter if you're in rookie ball or AAA, they're there. All you need to do is believe that you can do that and then they'll give you the opportunity. So for everybody that looks different of course, but I think you need to lean into your strengths and be as successful as you can be. The only way you're going to do that is doing what you're good at now.

I have to ask, did you think that you were going to get a bobblehead at any point in your career?

It wasn't something I consider, necessarily a goal of mine for sure. But yeah, it's neat to see the little bobblehead and my family likes to collect them, so it's a fun little thing.

If you could have a bobblehead of anyone: music, sports, whatever the case may be, who would you pick?

It's tough. It really isn't that difficult to obtain but I would love like a Myles Garrett or a Nick Chubb bobblehead. I'm a big Browns fan. Those are two of my favorite players.

When it comes to your day to day life, when you're not preparing for a start, how do you keep yourself busy?

Sleep. Try to get some good coffee, you know, hit a record store if we're in a city that's got some good ones. I've got a little dog that keeps me busy, and we enjoy Atlanta. There's a lot to do around here. It's nice to be home.

Does it ever sink in how fast the jump was, or how big the changes were over the course of those six months from your GreenJackets debut to your Braves debut?

Yeah, it was pretty quick. I mean, it's interesting to talk about, you know, college being three years ago and three years ago, a lot happened. I still wasn't drafted three years ago.

There was lots that happened pretty quick and I think that it's just being patient but ambitious at the same time. You have to be willing to control what you can control, and try to get better and let things fall into place as they will.
