- 70-80% of the energy used by a low-rise elevator is while the elevator is sitting idle. This elevator has a "sleep mode" similar to a computer. When the elevator is not used after a pre-determined time, it goes into sleep mode by shutting off the cab lights & fan and dimming the buttons to help save energy while the elevator is idle.
- The elevator is a traction elevator and uses no hydraulic oil. The typical hydraulic elevator uses 300 gallons of oil over its life.

Ownership Group

William H. Shea, Jr.

Majority Owner/Managing Partner

William H. Shea, Jr., better known as Bill, is the majority owner of the Lexington Legends, the Single-A affiliate of the Houston Astros, and is managing partner of the Omaha Storm Chasers, the Triple-A affiliate of the Kansas City Royals.

Shea has been a baseball fan for many years, spending his family vacations touring major and minor league parks throughout the country. In 2005, he entered the sports entertainment industry when he became the majority owner of the Lexington Legends, then-Applebee's Park and the Southwest Michigan Devil Rays. With his history of enhancing profitable franchises in strategic geographic locations, Bill envisions similar results in minor league sports - continuing to grow the company while maintaining the appropriate risk profile that investors desire.

Outside of baseball, Shea is the CEO of Penn Virginia Resource Partners, L.P. (PVR) and Penn Virginia GP Holdings L.P. (PVG), both NYSE listed public companies. PVG is the General Partner of PVR. PVR is a coal royalty and natural gas midstream business with coal royalty interests in Kentucky, West Virginia, Virginia, Pennsylvania, Illinois and New Mexico. The natural gas midstream business is based in Dallas, TX with operations in Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana and Pennsylvania.

In addition, he serves on the Board of Trustees of the Franklin Institute and the Philadelphia Free Library. He is also a director of the Kayne Anderson MLP Income Fund (KYN), Kayne Anderson Total Energy Return Fund (KYE), Niska Gas Storage Partners (NKA) and Gibson Energy LLC.

Shea currently lives in the suburbs of Philadelphia, Pa.

Ownership Group

Alan M. Stein
President

Alan Stein has been a baseball man his whole life. His dreams were captured by Frank Robinson, Vada Pinson and the 1961 Cincinnati Reds, cultivated by the mid-1970s Big Red Machine and have continued through the success of his three baseball franchises, the Omaha Storm Chasers, Lexington Legends and the Southwest Michigan Devil Rays. Along with his partner Bill Shea, Stein and their company, Ivy Walls Management, purchased a majority share of the Omaha franchise in 2006.

Under his leadership as president of the company, the club has seen attendance rise from 303,749 fans the year before they purchased the club to 406,276 fans during the 2010 season. Today, with the stage set for a bright future in Werner Park, Stein's commitment to professional baseball in the Omaha metro area is a dream come true for the entire community.

Stein is also well-known nationally for his volunteer efforts and humanitarian work with countless charitable, civic and service organizations. He has been fortunate to serve on Minor League Baseball's Board of Trustees as Vice Chairman, allowing him to help shape the future of Minor League Baseball.

Stein resides in his home town of Lexington, Ky.

HOW WE GOT HERE

A spoken history of Werner Park and the Omaha Storm Chasers

by Alan Stein, transcribed by Mike Feigen

welcome to werner park

When the Omaha Storm Chasers take the field at Werner Park for the first time on April 15, it will mark the beginning a new era of professional sports in the Omaha metro area.

The team, a youthful blend of power, speed and baseball pedigree, will serve as a reminder that the future is always brimming with possibility. The ballpark, a spacious greenscape with wide concourses accented by Nebraska limestone buildings, will remind folks that progress doesn't have to come at the expense of common sense. And the game of baseball, with its subtle crescendos and swift bursts of action, will transport fans to evenings gone by in a pastoral setting in which America's National Pastime was originally conceived.

Where else in Omaha can a baseball fan still hear the crack of the bat? Not the dull ping of metal, the crack of hand-crafted wood connecting with rawhide. Think about that. The simple sound that symbolizes summer was precariously close to becoming part of a bygone era. Thanks to a chance encounter and the groundswell of support that followed, a new era is now upon us.

I. WALKING IN MEMPHIS...INTERNATIONAL AIRPORT

Team President Alan Stein was in the Memphis airport on his way home to Lexington, Ky., after another slew of meetings in Omaha. Despite a successful 2007 season that saw the Omaha Royals' club increase its attendance from 4,600 fans to 4,800 fans per game, uncertainty surrounded the future of the franchise that February morning. The city of Omaha was preparing to announce a new, downtown, $139 million stadium for the NCAA Men's College World Series, yet the 24,000-seat capacity and uncertain revenue streams for Stein's team left him with more questions than answers.

Stein was no baseball rookie – in Lexington, the enormously successful Legends franchise smashed Class-A South Atlantic League records with 446,000 fans in its inaugural season of 2001 – and he saw that number posted in a ballpark with a capacity of less than 7,000 seats.

Was going downtown the best move for the Omaha franchise? Would the club be able to continue its mission of “families, fun and affordability” in a large, costly stadium? What about the 13 other cities in the Pacific Coast League footprint calling on Stein on what seemed like a daily basis, ready to pounce if the team was rendered homeless? Was it time to abandon the ownership's primary goal, to keep the franchise in the Omaha metro area for years to come?

That's when fate intervened.

Mark Wayne, Sarpy County Administrator, baseball enthusiast and fellow air traveler, was also en route to Lexington and struck up a conversation with Stein. Build in Sarpy County, he suggested, and the team could enjoy the benefits of being located in one of the most affluent, well-educated and fastest-growing counties in the state of Nebraska.

Two hours and some crude cocktail napkin sketches later, what would eventually develop into Werner Park was born.

II. THE SARPY COUNTY DREAM TEAM

Not all cocktail napkin drawings turn into reality, Stein quickly points out. Ballparks aren't built on luck, either, so from the time Stein and Wayne met in Memphis in February of 2008 until Opening Day in April of 2011, a lot of hard work and tough decisions had to be made.

Fanning out from Wayne's circle of influence, Sarpy County Attorney Lee Polikov and County Commissioner Joni Jones were next to the table. Along with Stein, they met to see if any common ground existed and outlined the parameters of what a multi-faceted deal might look like. The principal owner of the franchise, Bill Shea, solidified the ownership group's position that staying in the Omaha metro area was of utmost importance. Shea also pledged to commit team dollars toward the new ballpark. From there, folks like Rich Jansen, Fred Uhe and Kermit Brashear joined the discussion, and ultimately became the biggest proponents of a potential ballpark in Sarpy County.

In the meantime, the Omaha ballclub was having tremendous success in the community and at the turnstiles. Programs such as Hit the Books gained traction in the schools and the average attendance made its largest jump in 11 years, rising from 4,803 to 5,375 per game. Werner Enterprises, a local Sarpy County based-company, continued to invest in the franchise as the title sponsor, giving added motivation for the team and the community to strike a deal.

Though it took a little over a year, and with added input from each of the area mayors and several other county officials, the Sarpy County Board approved a 25-year land-use deal on March 17, 2009. A site was selected over the following months and a groundbreaking celebration was held August 12, 2009 near the intersection of Highway 370 and 126th streets.

III. CHASING SOMETHING NEW

About the same time that shovels were hitting dirt in Sarpy County, wheels were turning at Omaha Royals headquarters at Rosenblatt Stadium. Martie Cordaro and Rob Crain, two of Stein's prized pupils and the faces of the club's highly-successful youth movement, recognized that the potential for a team rebrand was possible during the move following the 2010 season.

The team commissioned focus groups and other studies that asked everyday people about team names and identities, delving deep into the psyche of the Omaha fan base and discovering what made Nebraskans tick and what they wanted as sports fans. From that point, and leading well into 2010, Cordaro and Crain worked along with Minor League moguls Plan B Branding to cultivate a brand-new image, with only loose restrictions. They also put together a Name the Team contest, designed to open the window of possibilities to a variety of nicknames and ideas from the fanbase, which continued its remarkable growth through 2009 and 2010 to nearly 5,900 fans per game.

What resulted from the focus groups and studies was something Cordaro and Crain suspected all along: while many fans liked the traditional Royals moniker shared by the Kansas City parent club, the people of Omaha didn't have anything to call their own. In addition, they discovered that the only thing people talked about more than Nebraska football was the weather.

2011 OMAHA STORM CHASERS

Sue Harold, a Lincoln native, hit the proverbial nail on the head during the Name the Team contest and earned a pair of box seat season tickets for her winning entry, giving the Omaha Storm Chasers their new name.

With the weather and meteorologically-themed name and new identity, the Storm Chasers were able to build on the success of their “families, fun, affordability” mantra and develop an educational outreach beyond the booming Hit the Books reading program. Math and science became top priorities for the club’s educational mission, which the club has been working on since moving into Werner Park’s offices on December 17, 2010. Interest from schools and school groups have more than doubled in the first quarter of 2011, most of which had no connection to the Royals at Rosenblatt Stadium.

IV. BRINGING IT HOME

Stein, who made sure to specifically thank Shea, Cordaro, Crain, Storm Chasers’ Controller Laurie Schlender and the rest of the full-time staff for their efforts, has been blown away by the excitement in the community. He noted the turnout of 5,000 fans for an outdoor tour of Werner Park on January 22nd, a day featuring temperatures dipping south of 20 degrees. He also pointed out the support of the team’s corporate partners, namely Werner Enterprises, without whose support the team might have faced a credibility gap with the public.

2011 OMAHA STORM CHASERS

welcome to werner park

He even paused to thank Omaha Mayors Mike Fahey and Jim Suttle and Omaha Chamber of Commerce President and CEO David Brown – the latter of whom worked to ensure the team didn't leave the Omaha metro area entirely. Though leaving was never part of the organization's agenda, Stein acknowledges that several suitors had enticing offers on the table and it meant a lot to see the city of Omaha support the franchise even if playing at the downtown stadium was not possible.

As it turns out, the Sarpy County location has been a blessing that not even the most ardent supporter had envisioned. With easy access for families in suburban west Omaha via I-80 and from Bellevue via Highway 370, the Storm Chasers are within a 15-minute drive of more of their fans than they ever were before. The wide-open spaces at Werner Park provide room for the Centris Family Fun Zone complete with working carousel, the Borsheim's wiffle ball diamond, the Quality Brands Downdraught Bar, the McDonald's Berm grass seating area and more.

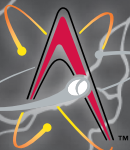

Fans are able to walk 360 degrees around the field while inside the ballpark, receiving an unobstructed view of the game from nearly everywhere along the nearly 1/3-mile perimeter. The size of the park is appropriate for Minor League Baseball. Kids can enjoy themselves. Tickets can be purchased for as little as $6 each. They can see every pitch, breathe in the unmistakable smells of grilled hotdogs and popcorn, see the fresh cut grass, feel the warmth of the sun and taste the ice cold sodas and beer – and yes, hear those symbolic sounds of summer. Crack! ⚾

Werner Park offers unparalleled sightlines and a wide-open, family-friendly setting with numerous kids areas.

23,795 Fans Say Goodbye to an Old Friend

By Kevin McNabb

OMAHA, NE - A crowd of 23,795 fans - the largest of the 2010 season and the seventh-biggest in the 42-year history of the Omaha Royals - turned out Thursday night to say goodbye to an old friend. During an emotional night full of tributes and with many former professional ballplayers on hand, the final regular season game in the history of Rosenblatt Stadium went into the books as a 6-2 Royals victory over the Round Rock Express.

Round Rock scored a run in the first inning on a wild pitch by Kansas City right-hander Luke Hochevar, who was making his second rehab start with Omaha. But, in the bottom of the first inning, Minor League player of the year candidate Mike Moustakas continued his power surge by belting a two-run homer to right-center field, putting the Royals on top 2-1.

The home run - which turned out to be the last one hit in 62-year old ballpark's history - extended the 21-year old phenom's hitting streak to eight games and marked his eighth round-tripper and 23rd and 24th RBI during the streak. It was the 15th homer for "Moose" in just 48 games with Triple-A Omaha and his Minor League-leading 36th home run of the season.

Round Rock starter Sergio Perez (3-4) gave up two more runs in the third inning, walking three batters, yielding a sacrifice fly to Scott Thorman and uncorking a wild pitch to plate Irving Falu, making it 4-1.

Each team scored a run in the fourth, with Omaha's coming home on an infield single by Jarrod Dyson, his second of four hits on the night. Dyson, who has hits in nine of his last ten tilts, would also collect two stolen bases and score two runs in the contest. He picked up the final hit in the 'Blatt's history with an eighth inning single, immediately after Kurt Mertins' run-scoring single closed out the game's scoring.

Royals lefty Edgar Osuna (1-3) got the final win in the ballpark's history. It was the 22-year old pitcher's first Triple-A win. Victor Marte, Brian Anderson and Tim Collins each tossed a scoreless inning of relief. Collins retired the Express in order in the ninth inning, getting Brandon Barnes on a fly out to Dyson in right-center field 2-hours-and-31 minutes after the historic game's first pitch.

Omaha (78-62) won its final four contests at Rosenblatt, as the Royals swept the series from Round Rock (55-85), which lost its ninth game in a row.

Thursday night's crowd brings the Royals total attendance this season to 406,276 over 69 openings for an average of 5,888. It was the largest attendance total since the 2000 season, when 413,713 watched Omaha's Triple-A club at Rosenblatt. ⚾
