Fall League Alum of the Day

Ryan Howard (Phoenix Desert Dogs, 2004) made his Arizona Fall League debut after playing in his first 19 MLB games. He was drafted in the fifth round of the 2001 draft out of Missouri State University and climbed into the big leagues during his fourth season as a professional, going on to play 13 consecutive seasons for the Philadelphia Phillies. A career .258/.343/.515 hitter, Howard's accolades began as early as his rookie MLB season where he won the National League Rookie of the Year (2005)—only to follow it up the next year with the National League MVP award (2006), and two years later with his first and only World Series ring (2008). His 382 home runs rank 69th on the all-time MLB leaderboard.
