2022 Player of the Year

2022 Pitcher of the Year

To Our Fans:

On behalf of Major League Baseball, it is my pleasure to welcome you to the third season of the new Appalachian League. Baseball has a storied history in Appalachian League communities, and we are proud to continue this tradition in partnership with USA Baseball, the national governing body for amateur baseball. The Appalachian League is well on its way to becoming the premier collegiate summer league for elite rising college freshmen and sophomore players.

Last season featured many exciting developments for the Appalachian League, largely because of how Appalachian League fans embraced the new format and the collegiate players who visited these communities for the summer. The Appalachian League and its teams continued to be a driving force for good in their communities. League charitable outreach totaled more than $3.4 million in gift-in-kind and monetary donations.

We expect the 2023 Appalachian League season to be even better than last year. The season will feature many of the nation's top collegiate athletes across a 48-game season, with players from every Power 5 conference plus others who have existing personal ties to the communities. Summer leagues have a long record of developing the next generation of baseball's stars, allowing you to catch a glimpse of the next Jim Thome, CC Sabathia, Jose Altuve or David Wright before they excel in the big leagues. The Appy League will be where these prospects showcase their abilities and grow their skills on and off the field.

The Appalachian League plays a central role in our new player development system. These players will benefit from new training methods and state-of-the-art technology, as well as educational programming designed to prepare them for careers as professional athletes. With this modernized system also comes significant enhancements to the fan experience. Our goals are to provide the most fun possible for fans, the highest level of play, and growth opportunities for our sport's future players.

As we move into the third year of the new Appalachian League, we are grateful to you, our fans, for supporting America's Pastime and embracing this new format in your community. Thank you for coming to the ballpark today and supporting our great game. We couldn't be more excited for another season of the Appalachian League in communities like this one, and we look forward to hosting high-caliber baseball for years to come.

Sincerely,

Robert D. Manfred, Jr.

Summer 2023

Dear Fans

On behalf of Major League Baseball and USA Baseball it is my pleasure to welcome you to the 2023 Appalachian League season!

As the Executive Director, a former college baseball player and a 40-year veteran of professional baseball, I am honored and proud to be part of such a special league. The 2023 Appalachian League will feature elite college players from across the country who have been extended the opportunity to play and compete in your great city and beautiful stadium, with the best and most loyal fans in baseball.

Our proud league will feature an emphasis on player development with the goal of helping the players compete at the highest level, improve their skills, and play winning baseball. Our rosters will consist of collegiate players from every Power 5 conference in the country and over one hundred Division 1 colleges and universities. Our coaching staffs will include former Major League managers, coaches and players, several current and former college coaches, and numerous other high quality experienced coaches.

I promise that the 2023 Appalachian League season will be an exciting and high level of baseball for your entertainment this summer. Thank you for following these great young players on their journey from the Appalachian League to their dream of playing professional baseball.

LEAGUE HISTORY

The Appalachian League was born in 1911 with teams in Asheville, N.C.; Bristol, Va.; Cleveland, Tenn.; Johnson City, Tenn.; Knoxville, Tenn.; and Morristown, Tenn. That first version of the league lasted just four years, with the league dis-banding in the middle of the 1914 season when Morristown and Middlesboro, Ky., folded on June 17.

The league reformed in 1921 with six teams: Bristol; Cleveland; Greeneville, Tenn.; Johnson City; Kingsport, Tenn.; and Knoxville. That incarnation of the league managed five seasons, before again closing up shop midway through 1925.

In 1937, the league was restarted with teams in Elizabethton, Tenn.; Johnson City; Newport, Tenn.; and Pennington Gap, Va. During World War II, while most other minor leagues ceased operations, the Appalachian League played on. It continued right up until 1955. That year legendary minor league slugger Leo "Muscle" Shoals led the league with 33 homers and 134 RBIs in a 126-game season for Kingsport. It was the fifth Appalachian League home run title for Shoals, who had also led in 1939, 1946, 1947 and 1951.

The Appalachian League reformed again in 1957, its first year as a short-season league. Six teams played that year, in Bluefield, W.Va.; Johnson City; Kingsport; Pulaski, Va.; Salem, Va.; and Wytheville, Va. The league served as a rookie-level league in Minor League Baseball from 1963 until 2021, when it became part of the Prospect Development Pipeline (PDP) and began fielding teams with collegiate athletes.

A collaborative effort between MLB and USA Baseball, the PDP establishes a player development pathway for amateur baseball players in the United States. The Appalachian League serves as an integral part of the identification and development process for the USA Baseball Collegiate National Team, along with other future national teams. Players receive extensive visibility to MLB Club scouts throughout the season and instruction from former MLB players designed to prepare them for careers as professional athletes.

APPALACHIAN LEAGUE EXTRA-INNINGS FORMAT

In 2022, the Appalachian League announced the addition of a “sudden death” extra-innings rule similar to the Frontier League and MLB Draft League. There is one half inning played to determine a winner. At the end of regulation (7 or 9 innings), the home team manager will determine if they want to play offense or defense. The player on the lineup card immediately preceding the batter due up will be placed on first base. The defensive team will have three outs to prevent the offense from scoring. If the team on offense scores, they will win the game. If the defensive team retires the side without allowing a run, they will win the game. Statistics during sudden death will not be recorded.

Appalachian League teams played 18 extra-inning games under the new format in 2022. The Johnson City Doughboys led the way with 5 sudden-death victories, the Danville Otterbots finished with 4. The team on defense in sudden death won 10 times, the offensive team won eight times.

ABOUT

The 99-year history of baseball in Bluefield continues this summer as the club enters its third season in the newly revamped Appalachian League. Most recently an affiliate of the Toronto Blue Jays organization since 2011, Bluefield revealed a new identity in 2021 as the Ridge Runners.

Reflective of the rich railroad history of the Bluefield area, the name references the fact that historic Bowen Field at Peters Park straddles the state line of Virginia and West Virginia, as did the original namesake of the team.

Beginning in 1964, the original Ridge Runner locomotive circumnavigated a one-mile loop atop East River Mountain, half in Virginia and half in West Virginia. The little train now resides just outside the right field wall of Bowen Field. On warm summer days, you can see and hear the excited passengers as the train makes its loop throughout Lottio Park.

A 13-time Appalachian league champion, Bluefield most recently won the title in 2001. Notable alumni of the club include Hall of Famers Cal Ripken, Jr. and Eddie Murray, as well as current Major Leaguers Kevin Pillar, Vladimir Guerrero, Jr., Alejandro Kirk, and Noah Syndergaard.

ABOUT

Bristol returned to its roots prior to the 2021 Appalachian League season with the same name it used when it began its second foray into the league over 100 years ago as the then-newly renamed State Liners.

The team's name also celebrates the unique nature of the Twin Cities which share the same name and lie directly across the Tennessee-Virginia border from each other. The boundary between the two cities is also the state line, which runs along State Street in their common downtown district.

To further celebrate the historical connection, the team's logos will use the same blue and red coloring that appear in the American flag, and will incorporate a cream which harkens back to a color found in many old-time baseball jerseys.

A number of notable players have suited up for Bristol over the years, including Hall of Famer Alan Trammell and many other former MLB stars, among them Bobby Thomson, Lance Parrish, Lou Whitaker, Carlos Lee, Gio Gonzalez and Chris Young who is currently the general manager of the Texas Rangers.

Most recently an affiliate of the Pittsburgh Pirates organization since 2014, Bristol also served as a farm team for the Detroit Tigers and Chicago White Sox over the years. It has won seven Appalachian League championships with its last coming in 2002.

ABOUT

Baseball has long been a sport with an obsession in hosiery. From the Red Stockings to the White Sox, teams have used these colorful uniform accessories to differentiate themselves on the field and brand themselves off of it. Couple that with Burlington, North Carolina's century-long tradition of hosiery manufacturing and you have a perfect match.

Known as the "Hosiery Capital of the South," Burlington decided to embrace its history and tradition when it announced its "sockingly unique" identity for its entry into the newly-reorganized Appalachian League. Fans can certainly say they have a team that is uniquely theirs when they cheer on the Sock Puppets.

With over 80 hosiery mills in Burlington by the early 1900s, the textile industry has always been an important part of the local economy. That was never more true than during the Great Depression when a switch from cotton to a new synthetic fiber called rayon helped the city become one of the largest manufacturers of textiles in the world, which saved it from many of the economic difficulties of the time.

The Sock Puppets will not only carry on that tradition but a strong history of success on the field as well. Most recently an affiliate of the Kansas City Royals organization since 2007, the organization has seen a host of great players don the Burlington uniform over the years, including Hall of Famer Jim Thome, former MLB stars Manny Ramirez, C.C. Sabathia and Bartolo Colon, current Major Leaguers Salvador Perez, Wil Myers and Vinnie Pasquantino, and current Cincinnati Reds manager David Bell.

ABOUT

For the first time in almost three decades, baseball in Danville was given its own unique identity in 2021, one formed by ideas from fans and community members and which represents Danville and Southern Virginia to the fullest extent. Derived from two overwhelming themes the team heard in conversations with fans and saw in a name submission contest - the playfulness and symbolism of otters and the future of STEM education and new industry across the southside of Virginia - the organization is now known as the Danville Otterbots.

The Otterbots' primary blue is designed to honor the Dan River and highlight the role it played in building the tobacco and textile industries that defined Danville for generations. The team's secondary orange, featured in the otter's eyes, is closely aligned with the color of the HOME sign, formerly above Dan River Fabrics, currently adorned in the River District on Main Street. The tobacco industry, the mills and the HOME sign were three more recurring themes seen in name submissions. The neon typeface, which will be proudly displayed on the team's jerseys, is a tribute to two additional themes: the blur of the cars racing by at nearby speedways and race tracks and the bright lights of Caesars Virginia, the new resort and casino that call Danville home.

The 2022 season was highlighted by a slew of improvements and new programs. Danville now boasts the Appy League's first Ballpark Sensory Room: Luca's Place, presented by the Hughes Center. The Goodyear's Good Seats program donated 20 tickets per home game to local non profit organizations. A new "History of Danville Baseball" mural greeted fans along the 1st base concourse, featuring logos of the Danville Leafs, Danville All-Stars, Danville Braves, and Danville 97s. Finally, “Lagerbot,” brewed by Danville’s Ballard Brewing, was available all season long in a branded can featuring the Otterbots name and logo. The Sensory Room, Goodyear’s Good Seats Program, and mural are still in place for 2023.

Replacing Lagerbot for the 2023 season is the Otterbots’ latest collaboration with Ballard Brewing: Home Run Helles. Also new for 2023 is the Otterbots Analytic Experience, presented by Hargrave Military Academy. The experience features a speed pitch machine and virtual reality baseball, introducing fans to the complex data-driven models dominating modern baseball.

ABOUT

The most successful team in Appalachian League history with 14 championships, Elizabethton looks to keep that storied history alive with its new identity as the River Riders.

Surrounded by the Watauga and Doe Rivers and with Watauga Lake just miles away, Elizabethton has become a popular destination for aquatic recreation, including whitewater rafting, kayaking, and fishing.

The Watauga River, which runs parallel to the third-base line of Northeast Community Credit Union Ballpark, has some of the highest quality whitewater in the Southeast with Class I, II, and III rapids.

The drier surface of the baseball diamond has proven to be a little more predictable for Elizabethton over the years as the organization has won an Appy League-high 14 championships, including back-to-back titles in 2017-18. Most of that success came as an affiliate of the Minnesota Twins organization, a relationship that dated back to the 1974 campaign.

Alumni of the Elizabethton club include Hall of Famer Kirby Puckett, former Major Leaguers Gary Gaetti, Kent Hrbek, and Joe Mauer, as well as current big leaguers Byron Buxton, Jose Berrios, Brusdar Graterol, Jose Miranda and Brent Rooker.

ABOUT

With a history dating back to 1921, baseball has long been a part of Greenville’s narrative. That tradition continues as the newly rebranded Greenville Flyboys will continue to play in the Appalachian League, one of the nation’s premier wooden bat collegiate summer leagues.

Flyboys was chosen as the official name of the Greenville club in reference to the fact that the team’s stadium was constructed near to the location of an old airfield, as well as the strong history of patriotism in the area.

The “jewel of the Appalachian League,” Pioneer Park opened in 2004 in conjunction with Tusculum College and was built just a few hundred feet from the former runway of Tusculum Field, the first airport in Greene County.

Most recently an affiliate of the Cincinnati Reds since 2018, Greenville was also a longtime affiliate of the Houston Astros from 2004-17, winning Appy League titles in 2004 and 2015, and played host to two versions of the Greenville Burley Cubs from 1921-25 and 1938-42.

Among the many future Major Leaguers to play in Greenville are current stars Jose Altuve, Lance McCullers, Jr., Carlos Correa, J.D. Martinez, Joe Musgrove, Jonathan India, and Graham Ashcraft.

ABOUT

The baseball jerseys in Johnson City sport a new color and new logo after being affiliated with the St. Louis Cardinals for 45 years, it joined the newly-reorganized Appalachian League as the Doughboys.

The nickname is in reference to a statue behind their home stadium, TVA Credit Union Ballpark, named "Spirit of the American Doughboy." Doughboys was a nickname for American soldiers during World War I and the statue honors U.S. infantrymen who died in service to their country.

The Doughboys moniker also harkens back to the city's baseball past as Johnson City's original Appalachian League team was called the Soldiers from 1910-38.

Johnson City is the final champion of the affiliated Appy League, winning its 11th title in 2019. It had served as an affiliate of the Cardinals since 1975, among its alumni former Cy Young winners Ron Guidry (1978) and LaMarr Hoyt (1983), 1991 National League MVP Terry Pendleton, and current big leaguers Paul DeJong, Ryan Helsley, Jordan Hicks, and Nolan Gorman.

ABOUT

In 1775, Daniel Boone and 35 axmen began clearing forests in East Tennessee, near present-day Kingsport, to create the Wilderness Road.

Little did they know that they would later be memorialized by a baseball team over 200 years later, but that is exactly the case as the Appalachian League's Kingsport organization has been rebranded as the Axmen in honor of that group of frontiersmen.

Much like how the Wilderness Road led early settlers from the East into Kentucky, the Kingsport Axmen hope that this new identity will help lead them to continued success in the new-look collegiate wooden bat Appy League.

It is the first name change the club has seen since 1980 when it became an affiliate of the New York Mets. En route to seven league titles over the years, dozens of future big leaguers have passed through Kingsport on their way to The Show, including Dale Murphy, Darryl Strawberry, Dwight Gooden, Jose Reyes, David Wright, two-time National League Cy Young Award winner Jacob deGrom, reigning NL Batting Champion Jeff McNeil, Jarred Kelenic, Francisco Alvarez and Brett Baty.

ABOUT

When the Appalachian League's Princeton organization started to look for a new nickname, it didn't have to look far.

Near to the team's home, Hunnicutt Field, is a small creek where you can often spot one of the area's more adorable, albeit pesky, animals.

While they might normally be referred to as groundhogs, that is not the case in West Virginia where residents often call them by the more colloquial name of whistlepigs, based on the high-pitched whistling sound they are known to make when they feel threatened.

That was as far as the search for a new team name needed to go and how the Princeton WhistlePigs became part of the new-look Appy League.

Previously known as the Princeton Rays due to their affiliation with Tampa Bay since 1997, the West Virginia town has seen its fair share of future big leaguers suit up for the hometown team, including Carl Crawford, Josh Hamilton, Kevin Kiermaier, Blake Snell, Wander Franco, Shane McClellan, and current Minnesota Twins manager Rocco Baldelli.

ABOUT

According to the Virginia Herpetological Society, 20 different species of turtles reside within the state's boundaries, over half of which can be found in the New River Valley where the town of Pulaski is located.

In a nod to that New River Valley heritage and its waterways teeming with terrapins, the newly-restructured Appalachian League's Pulaski franchise was rebranded as the River Turtles.

The inspiration behind the River Turtles name was based on feedback from the local baseball community, as well as a renewed commitment to a family-friendly culture at Motor Mile Field at Calfee Park.

Most recently an affiliate of the New York Yankees, Pulaski is a four-time Appy League champion since joining the league in 1946. Its alumni include former MLB stars David Justice, Steve Avery, and Javy Lopez, and even legendary football coach Urban Meyer who spent two seasons in the Atlanta Braves organization. Current major leaguers from Pulaski include Anthony Volpe, Nestor Cortes, Edwin Diaz, and Garrett Whitlock.
